

I. The Name of Allah Al-Wakeel

A. What is the Meaning of the Name Al-Wakeel?

One of the most beautiful and powerful names of Allah is Al-Wakeel, which means “the one we depend on” or “the disposer of affairs”. This name reflects the essence of reliance on Allah, which is a core concept in Islam. Reliance on Allah means to entrust one’s affairs to Allah, who is the best planner and protector of everything. However, reliance on Allah does not mean to be passive or fatalistic; rather, it means to balance between effort, trust, and acceptance of the divine will.

B. The Name Al-Wakeel in Quran and Sunnah (Hadith)

The name Al-Wakeel appears in the Quran eleven times, in different contexts and situations. For example, Allah says in Surah Al-Imran: “And whoever relies upon Allah - then He is sufficient for him” [Quran 3:173]. This verse shows that reliance on Allah is a source of strength and sufficiency for the believers, especially in times of hardship and adversity. Another example is in Surah Al-Anfal: “And if they intend to deceive you - then sufficient for you is Allah. It is He who supported you with His help and with the believers” [Quran 8:62]. This verse shows that reliance on Allah is a source of protection and support for the believers, especially against the plots and schemes of the enemies.

The name Al-Wakeel also appears in many hadiths (sayings) of the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ, who exemplified the best model of reliance on Allah. For example, he said: “If you ask, then ask of Allah; and if you seek help, then seek help from Allah” [Tirmidhi]. This hadith shows that reliance on Allah means to seek all one’s needs and desires from Him alone, without associating any partners with Him. Another example is when he said: “Whoever says in the morning and evening: ‘I am pleased with Allah as a Lord, and with Islam as a religion, and with Muhammad as a Messenger’, then it is a duty upon Allah to please him” [Ahmad]. This hadith shows that reliance on Allah means to be content with His decree and His choice for us, without complaining or objecting.

C. Tawfeeq: Allah Making Efforts Successful

One of the terms that captures the essence of reliance on Allah is Tawfeeq, which means “Allah making efforts successful”. Tawfeeq refers to the divine guidance and assistance that enables one to perform good deeds and achieve favorable outcomes. It also implies that one’s effort must be in accordance with the Shariah (Islamic law) for it to be considered successful. Therefore, Tawfeeq is a gift from Allah that depends on His will and wisdom. As Allah says in Surah Al-Qasas (Stories 28:68): “And your Lord creates what He wills and chooses; not for them was the choice”. This verse shows that Tawfeeq is not something that humans can control or claim; rather, it is something that Allah bestows or withholds according to His plan.

D. Tie the Camel: Balance of Effort and Reliance

Reliance on Allah does not mean to abandon one’s duties or responsibilities; rather, it means to do one’s part and then entrust the results to Allah, which is Tawfeeq. Islam emphasizes a proactive approach, where individuals perform their duties while seeking Allah’s blessings for a successful outcome. This understanding is symbolized by the need to tie one’s camel and then put one’s trust in Allah. This expression is derived from a famous story narrated by Anas ibn Malik (RA), who said: “A man said: ‘O Messenger of Allah! Shall I tie my camel and rely upon Allah, or leave it loose and rely upon Allah?’ He said: ‘Tie it and rely upon Allah’” [Tirmidhi]. This story shows that reliance on Allah does not contradict taking practical measures; rather, it complements them.

Relying on Allah doesn't imply neglecting duties; rather, it's about fulfilling responsibilities and entrusting outcomes to Allah (Tawfeeq). Islam advocates a proactive approach—efforts coupled with seeking Allah’s blessings. The saying “tie your camel and rely upon Allah” embodies this, highlighting the need for practical measures alongside trust in Allah.

E. Expectations in Relying on Allah

Reliance on Allah also does not mean to expect miracles or supernatural interventions; rather, it means to acknowledge that Allah can influence outcomes despite human exertion. Even the most meticulously planned endeavors can fail if Allah wills it so, emphasizing the importance of acknowledging Allah’s ultimate control over events. As Allah says in Surah Al-Anfal: "And you [Muhammad] did not kill them, but it was Allah who killed them. And you threw not, when you threw, but it was Allah who threw”

The statement "If I do my part, then there is nothing left for Allah to do" is a misunderstanding of the concept of depending on Allah. It is true that we need to take practical steps to achieve our goals, but ultimately it is Allah who grants Tawfeeq and provides the means for it. We should always remember that our efforts alone are not sufficient without the help and guidance of Allah.

F. Depending on Allah in Daily Tasks

Depending on Allah in daily tasks such as vacuuming and washing dishes means acknowledging that Allah is the ultimate provider and sustainer, and recognizing that everything we have comes from

Him. Seeking Tawfeeq to achieve the purpose of vacuuming and washing dishes. You vacuuming and washing dishes to make your family happy and appreciative to your effort. If Allah denies you Tawfeeq then your family is not going to be happy or appreciate your efforts.

Depending on Allah is a matter of the heart, as it requires trust and faith in His guidance and provision. Doing our part, on the other hand, involves using our brain and muscles to take practical steps towards achieving our goals. For example, if someone is seeking employment, depending on Allah would involve making sincere dua and trusting in His guidance, while doing their part would involve updating their resume, applying for jobs, and networking with others in their field.

Even if someone studies for a test, they still need to depend on Allah for success. They should make sincere Dua'a for His guidance and help, and trust that He will grant them Tawfeeq to do well on the test. What could go wrong is if they neglect to seek Allah's help and rely solely on their own abilities, which can lead to arrogance and a false sense of self-sufficiency. Also, one may get sick on the day of the test, get stuck on traffic, get a flat tire or misunderstands the questions of the test.

G. Does Allah grants Tawfeeq to Believers Only? and Why?

The outcome of the test is not solely dependent on whether someone is a believer or non-believer, but rather on their preparation and effort. The one who studied and prepared for the test is more likely to pass, regardless of their religious affiliation. However, it is important to remember that success ultimately comes from Allah, and we should always depend on Him for guidance and help. Allah grants Tawfeeq to believers and non-believers, to those who rely on him and to the ones who did not rely on him. The reason is to prevent hypocrisy. If Tawfeeq comes only to believers, then when someone is becoming a believers, we will not know if he is becoming a believers because he truly believe or because he/she loves success that is only available to believers. Same why doesn't Allah make only believers rich. When someone is becoming a believer, you never know if he is doing it to be rich or because he truly believes. The purpose of life is to test us. Granting success and wealth to believers only would contradict with the purpose of life and leads to hypocrisy.

H. Probability of failure.

Probability of failure refers to the likelihood that a particular outcome will not be achieved. Depending on Allah does not guarantee success in every situation, as Allah tests His servants with trials and difficulties. However, depending on Allah increases the likelihood of success, as it involves seeking His guidance and help, which can lead to positive outcomes.

I. Two Extremes Regarding the Concept of Relaying on Allah

The first extreme is the right extreme, which is to say that Allah brought me the disease and he is the one that will take it away. The left extreme is for those who ignore Allah and rely on the doctor's ability to diagnose the disease and prescribe the right medication. When they heal out of sickness, they will feel it is only because the doctor is a good doctor and the medication was a good medication. The true Muslim is the middle between these two extremes. He/she will do their part by going to the doctor and taking the prescribed medications, but they will put their full trust in Allah granting Tawfeeq by guiding the doctor to make the right diagnosis and prescribe a good medications.

We believe that Allah is the ultimate healer, and we should seek His help and guidance in all matters, including our health. However, we should also take practical steps to ensure our well-being, such as seeking medical treatment and taking care of our bodies. The two extremes regarding this issue are those who rely solely on medical treatment and ignore Allah's help and those who rely solely on Allah's help and neglect medical treatment. Islam is in the middle, and we should take practical steps while seeking Allah's help and guidance.

Omar Ibn Al-Khatib said that those who stayed in the Masjid claiming that they depend on Allah to bring them sustenance were lazy and should not be given any assistance. He argued that they should take practical steps to earn a living and not rely solely on Allah's help.

J. Example I - The Story of Titanic. Even God Cannot Sink It.

The engineer who built Titanic boasted and said that even God could not sink it, but the ship sank on its maiden voyage. The story of the Titanic is a tragic example of how human arrogance and negligence can lead to disaster, and how trusting and relying on Allah can save one from harm. The Titanic was a huge and luxurious ship that was built by the British White Star Line company in the early 20th century. It was considered to be the most advanced and unsinkable ship of its time, and it attracted many wealthy and famous passengers who wanted to travel from Southampton, England, to New York City, USA. However, on its maiden voyage in April 1912, the Titanic collided with an iceberg in the North Atlantic Ocean and sank within hours, killing more than 1,500 people out of the 2,240 on board.

The sinking of the Titanic was a result of many factors that showed the lack of Tawakul (trust and reliance on Allah) among the people involved in its construction and operation. Some of these factors are:

- The builders of the Titanic did not consult with Allah or seek His guidance and protection before starting their project. They relied on their own skills and technology, and did not acknowledge that everything is under Allah's control and decree. They boasted about their ship's size, speed, and safety, and claimed that "not even God Himself could sink this ship" .

- The owners of the Titanic did not equip it with enough lifeboats for all the passengers and crew. They only had 20 lifeboats that could carry about 1,178 people, which was less than half of the total number on board. They did this to save money and space, and to make the ship look more elegant. They also ignored the safety regulations that required more lifeboats for such a large vessel.
- The captain of the Titanic, Edward Smith, did not heed the warnings of other ships that reported icebergs in the area. He also did not slow down or change course to avoid them. He was under pressure from the White Star Line to make a fast and smooth crossing, and he wanted to impress the passengers and the public with his ship's performance. He trusted in his own experience and judgment, and did not seek Allah's help or guidance.
- The crew of the Titanic did not follow the proper procedures for dealing with an emergency. They did not inform the passengers about the severity of the situation, and they did not organize an orderly evacuation. They also gave priority to the first-class passengers over the others, and they discriminated against women and children from different races and religions. They did not act with justice and compassion, and they did not remember Allah or ask for His mercy.

On the other hand, there were some people who showed Tawakkul (trust and reliance on Allah) during the sinking of the Titanic. Some of these people are:

- The Muslim passengers who were on board the Titanic. There were at least six Muslims who traveled on the Titanic, mostly from Lebanon, Syria, and Turkey. They were either immigrants or traders who were going to America for a better life or business opportunities. They faced many challenges and hardships on their journey, such as racism, language barriers, and poor living conditions. However, they remained faithful to Allah and His Messenger ﷺ, and they performed their prayers and other acts of worship on board. When they realized that the ship was sinking, they accepted Allah's decree with patience and submission, and they recited the Shahada (There is no God except Allah and Muhammad is his messenger) before they died.
- The band members who played music until the end. There were eight musicians who were hired by the White Star Line to entertain the passengers on the Titanic. They belonged to different backgrounds and religions, but they shared a common passion for music. When they saw that the ship was doomed, they decided to stay on deck and play music to calm down the passengers and themselves. They chose songs that were cheerful and uplifting, such as “Nearer My God to Thee”. They sacrificed their lives for others, and they showed courage and dignity in their final moments.

These are some of the lessons that we can learn from the story of the Titanic in light of doing our part and relying on Allah for success:

- We should always acknowledge that Allah is the Creator and Sustainer of everything, and that nothing happens without His permission and wisdom. We should not be arrogant or negligent about His signs and warnings, and we should not rely on our own abilities or resources without seeking His help and guidance.
- We should always follow the commands and prohibitions of Allah and His Messenger ﷺ, and we should not transgress the limits or violate the rights of others. We should act with justice and compassion, and we should not discriminate or oppress anyone based on their race, religion, class, or gender.
- We should always be grateful for the blessings and opportunities that Allah gives us, and we should not waste them or misuse them. We should use them for good causes and beneficial purposes, and we should share them with others who are in need or less fortunate.
- We should always be prepared for the trials and tribulations that Allah tests us with, and we should not lose hope or despair. We should be patient and steadfast, and we should seek His forgiveness and mercy. We should also help others who are suffering or struggling, and we should support them with our words and deeds.
- We should always remember that this life is temporary and that the Hereafter is eternal. We should not be attached to this world or its pleasures, and we should not fear death or its consequences. We should strive for the pleasure of Allah and His Paradise, and we should avoid His anger and His Hellfire.

K. Example II – The Plan of the Immigration of the Prophet ﷺ from Mecca to Madina

The Hijra, or the migration of the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ and his companions from Makkah to Madinah, is a pivotal event in Islamic history. It marked the beginning of a new era for the Muslim community and the establishment of the first Islamic state. The Hijra was not a spontaneous or reckless decision, but a well-planned and carefully executed strategy that involved many elements of wisdom, courage, and trust in Allah. The Prophet ﷺ did not rely on miracles or supernatural interventions, but he used all the available means and resources to achieve his goal. He also sought Allah’s help and guidance at every step, and he was confident that Allah would protect him and his companions from the plots of their enemies. Some of the main features of the plan of the Hijra were:

- The Prophet ﷺ chose Madinah as his destination because it was a city that had a large population of Jews and Arabs who were familiar with the concept of monotheism and Prophethood. He also had established contacts with some of the tribes of Madinah who had pledged their allegiance to him and invited him to come to their city. Madinah was about 450 kilometers north of Makkah, but the Prophet ﷺ did not take the direct route to avoid being detected by the Quraysh, who were his main enemies in Makkah. Instead, he took a detour to the south-west, towards Yemen, and then turned north-east towards Madinah. This way, he confused and misled his pursuers who expected him to go straight north.
- The Prophet ﷺ chose Abu Bakr as his companion for the Hijra because he was one of his closest friends and most loyal supporters, Abu Bakr, the second best man after the Prophet ﷺ, and the first leader after his death, was also a wealthy and influential man who could provide the necessary funds and arrangements for the journey. He hired a guide named Abdullah ibn Urayqit, who was an expert in the desert routes and a trustworthy person. He also bought two camels, one for himself and one for the Prophet ﷺ, and prepared enough provisions and weapons for the trip.
- The Prophet ﷺ left his cousin Ali Ibn Abi Talib in his place in his house in Makkah to deceive the Quraysh who had planned to assassinate him. They had surrounded his house and waited for him to come out at night so that they could kill him together. However, they did not know that he had already left with Abu Bakr, and that Ali was the one who is sleeping in his bed instead. Ali also had another important task: to return the trusts that the Prophet ﷺ had in his possession. The Prophet ﷺ was known for his honesty and integrity, and many people in Makkah, even his enemies, had entrusted him with their valuables and belongings. He did not want to leave without fulfilling his obligations, so he asked Ali to deliver them back to their owners when they came back from their travels. The Prophet did not want to start returning the things that he was entrusted with before leaving because the evil Arab lords would know that he is preparing to leave.
- The Prophet ﷺ and Abu Bakr hid in a cave called Thawr for three days until the search for them subsided. The cave was about 5 kilometers south of Makkah, on a mountain that overlooked the valley. They were assisted by Abu Bakr's daughter Asma' and son Muhammad, who brought them food, water, and news from Makkah. Asma' also had a flock of sheep that she used to cover their tracks and erase their footprints. She was very brave and resourceful, and once when she did not have anything to carry the food in, she tore her belt into two pieces and used one as a bag and one as a belt. She was later known as “the woman of two belts”. Muhammad, the brother of Asma’ and the son of Abu Bakr, also played an important role: he would go to Makkah every day and listen to what the Quraysh were saying about their search for the Prophet ﷺ and Abu Bakr. He would then report back to them in the cave.

- The Prophet ﷺ and Abu Bakr left the cave after three days with their guide Abdullah ibn Urayqit. They followed an unusual route that avoided the main roads and passed through mountains and valleys. They faced many dangers and difficulties along the way, such as hunger, thirst, heat, cold, fatigue, wild animals, robbers, and enemies. However, they also witnessed many signs of Allah’s protection and support, such as:

The Hijra took about two weeks, and the Prophet ﷺ and Abu Bakr arrived in Madinah on the 12th of Rabi’ al-Awwal, in the year 622 CE. They were welcomed by the people of Madinah with joy and enthusiasm, and they settled in the house of Abu Ayyub al-Ansari, one of the Ansar (the helpers) who had hosted them. The Prophet ﷺ then built the first mosque in Madinah, which became the center of worship, education, and administration for the Muslims. He also established brotherhood between the Muhajirun (the emigrants) and the Ansar, and made a pact with the Jews and other tribes of Madinah. He also received revelations from Allah that guided him and his followers in their affairs. Thus, the Hijra was a successful plan that led to the establishment of a new community and a new civilization based on Islam.

L. The Concept of Being Disparate

Allah said in Surat Al-Namil (Ant 27:62) “Isn’t He the One who responds to the call of the disparate one who call on Him, and Who removes the evil, and makes you inheritors of the earth, generations after generations.” The disparate is the one who tried everything in his/her power and still failed. Allah’s special assistance come to the ones who become disparate. The very well done comprehensive plan of Hijra came to failure three times. Every time the Prophet fell under the condition of being disparate:

1. The Assassins Surrounded the House of the Prophet:

The first time is when the assassins surprised him by surrounding his house before he leaves. Allah special assistance came in the form of putting all of the assassins to sleep while standing up and leaning against the wall of the house. Usually it is very hard for someone to sleep while in the middle of important very serious task, not to mention that all of them go to sleep together at the same time is quite impossible. The Prophet ﷺ then left the house and did not flee right away. Rather, he picked up dirt and spray it on them giving them a profound message that you are nothing compared to the will of Allah.

2. The Pursuers Were Able To Reach To Cave:

The pursuers were able to reach to cave Thawr where the prophet ﷺ and Abo Baker were hiding. Allah's miraculous help can in a form of a spider web<sup>1</sup> that covered the entrance of the cave when they were hiding there, preventing the Quraysh from entering or noticing them. Along with the pigeon that laid eggs near the cave, making it seem like no one had been there recently.

3. Soraqa ibn Malik From Pursuit to Protection:

A Bedouin traveler, unaware of the unfolding events, encountered the Prophet ﷺ and his company on an unusual route to Medina. Upon reaching his destination, his friend, Soraqa Ibn Malik, welcomed him back. Unbeknownst to the Bedouin, there were nefarious intentions among evil Arab lords from Quraysh, who had offered a substantial reward of 100 camels for the capture or assassination of Muhammad ﷺ. During a casual conversation with Soraqa, the Bedouin disclosed that he had observed three individuals traveling on a specific route. In response, Soraqa urgently advised him to maintain absolute silence regarding this sighting.

Motivated by a sense of duty, Soraqa swiftly mounted his horse and headed towards the indicated location. There, he encountered the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ, accompanied by Abu Bakr and their guide. However, as Soraqa closed in on them, an inexplicable occurrence transpired – his horse became ensnared in deep sand, and his hands were paralyzed, rendering him incapable of launching an arrow. Faced with this dire predicament, Soraqa implored the divine, vowing that if his horse were liberated, he would abandon the pursuit and deter others from chasing the Prophet.

In an astonishing turn of events, Soraqa's horse miraculously broke free, seemingly in response to the Prophet's ﷺ prayers. Despite this clear sign of divine intervention, Soraqa grappled with his insatiable greed for the promised 100 camels. He regrettably failed to uphold his initial promise and, once again, attempted to launch an attack on the Prophet. Yet, as before, his horse inexplicably hindered his efforts. Determined but unsuccessful, Soraqa made a third attempt, only to experience the same inexplicable setback.

<sup>1</sup> Some scholars stated that the existence of the spider web and the pigeon is incorrect. They also stated that instead Allah protected his Prophet ﷺ by blinding the eyes of the pursuers when they looked inside the cave.

It was during this tumultuous series of events that the Prophet ﷺ recognized Soraqa's relentless pursuit and the persistent allure of the 100 camels. In a gesture of remarkable compassion and foresight, the Prophet proposed a solemn promise: if Soraqa were to return without divulging the Prophet's whereabouts, he would be granted the legendary Bracelets of Kisra, the Persian emperor. This offer, initially met with incredulity, gained credibility in Soraqa's eyes due to the miraculous events he had witnessed and his growing conviction that Muhammad ﷺ was under divine protection.

Years later, during the caliphate of Umar bin Al-Khattab, Muslim forces triumphed over Persia and brought back treasures, including the fabled Bracelets of Kisra. Umar summoned Soraqa ibn Malik and bestowed upon him the priceless bracelets, thereby fulfilling the promise foretold by the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ decades earlier.

M. Why Were the Efforts to Kill the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ Unsuccessful Before the Hijrah, and What Measures Were Taken Later to Facilitate His Assassination?

The evil Arab lords in the Quraysh community had made several unsuccessful attempts to kill the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ prior to the Hijrah, the momentous migration from Mecca to Medina. These efforts faced considerable obstacles and were foiled for the following reasons:

1. Clan Protection: The Prophet Muhammad ﷺ belonged to the Hashim clan, a subset of the larger Quraysh tribe residing in Mecca. Tribal norms and customs demanded the protection of one's own clan members. This sense of tribal honor and solidarity made it exceedingly challenging for anyone, including the Quraysh leaders, to harm or assassinate a member of their own tribe. Such actions would have provoked severe retaliation from the entire tribe.
2. Family Support: The Prophet's uncle, Abu Talib, played a pivotal role in safeguarding him from harm. Abu Talib was a highly respected figure within Mecca, and his unwavering support shielded Muhammad from the relentless pressure and opposition of the Quraysh leaders. Abu Talib's stance underscored the family's commitment to protecting the Prophet.
3. Political Considerations: Assassinating the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ carried significant political risks. His clan, the Hashim clan, and their allies held a position of respect and influence in Mecca. Consequently, harming him could have triggered internal conflicts and upheaval within the city, an outcome the Quraysh leaders were eager to avoid.

Despite their fervent efforts, these factors hindered the Quraysh leaders from executing their malevolent plans and eliminating the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ prior to the Hijrah. As the opposition to the Prophet and the burgeoning Muslim community intensified, the Quraysh leaders devised a new strategy to make his assassination feasible:

1. Assassination Plan with Tribal Involvement: Recognizing the futility of directly harming the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ due to the safeguards in place, the Quraysh leaders conceived a cunning plan. They decided to select a formidable and capable individual from each of the eleven major tribes in Mecca. These chosen individuals would collaboratively carry out the assassination of the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ. This approach aimed to diffuse responsibility among various tribes, making it arduous for the Hashim clan to mount retaliation against all of them.
2. Consideration of Blood Money: In addition to the scheme involving collective assassination, the Quraysh leaders contemplated another option: paying blood money (diyah) to the Hashim clan as compensation for the Prophet's death. This approach would not only eliminate the immediate threat posed by the Prophet but also provide a legal and financial resolution to the situation, reducing the likelihood of retaliatory conflict.

These calculated strategies reflected the desperation of the Quraysh leaders to remove what they perceived as a growing threat posed by the Prophet Muhammad ﷺ and the expanding Muslim community. Nevertheless, despite their meticulous planning, their endeavors did not culminate in success. The Prophet's migration to Medina (the Hijrah) marked a pivotal juncture in the history of Islam, allowing the Muslim community to flourish and prosper in a more hospitable environment.

N. Failure to Plan is a Plan to Fail

The phrase "failure to plan is a plan to fail" underscores the importance of careful and deliberate planning in achieving success or desired outcomes in various aspects of life, whether it's in personal goals, business ventures, projects, or any other endeavor. It suggests that when you don't take the time to plan and prepare adequately, you are essentially setting yourself up for failure or suboptimal results. The phrase also serves as a reminder that success rarely happens by chance. It emphasizes that taking the time to thoughtfully plan and prepare is a critical step in any endeavor and significantly increases your chances of reaching your desired outcomes while minimizing the risk of failure or setbacks. The phrase also implies the following:

4. Planning as a Prerequisite: Planning is viewed as a necessary step before taking any action. It involves setting clear objectives, identifying potential obstacles, and developing a strategy to overcome challenges. Without planning, you are essentially proceeding blindly, without a roadmap or direction.

5. Anticipation of Challenges: Effective planning involves anticipating potential problems or hurdles that may arise during the execution of a task or project. By identifying these challenges in advance, you can develop contingency plans to address them, minimizing the impact on your progress.
6. Resource Allocation: Planning also encompasses the allocation of resources, including time, money, manpower, and materials. Without proper planning, resources may be wasted or misused, leading to inefficiencies and increased costs.
7. Goal Alignment: Planning ensures that your actions are aligned with your goals and objectives. It helps you clarify what you want to achieve and how you intend to get there. Without a plan, your efforts may be scattered or unfocused, leading to ineffective outcomes.
8. Risk Mitigation: Planning allows for risk assessment and mitigation strategies. When you fail to plan, you are more susceptible to unexpected risks, and you may lack the means to address them effectively.
9. Measurement and Evaluation: A well-structured plan often includes metrics and benchmarks to measure progress and success. Without planning, it becomes challenging to gauge your performance or make necessary adjustments along the way.
10. Efficiency and Effectiveness: Planning increases the likelihood of achieving your goals efficiently and effectively. It provides a roadmap that helps you navigate the path to success with purpose and direction.
